New contemporary romance--the first of a new romance series--by the author of the bestselling romance "Always"

Documentary filmmaker Holly hates Christmas, but she must spend it with her much-loved mother and the man her mom married after she hadn't seen him for forty years. To make matters worse, big time Hollywood agent Levi Harper is her new step-father's son and Holly has just gone around Levi to get his client to sign a contract to do her new documentary.

Levi's furious because his actor is up for a big budget film due to film at the same time as Holly's piddly documentary. If only red-headed Holly weren't so frustrating--and so hot--he could have reasoned with her, but she's sexy and entangling. While she and Levi both hate Christmas and both think their parents should break-up, they're both drawn to one another and together they discover that Christmas can be both satisfying and magical.
